LWCF Success in Wyoming

The Land and Water Conservation Fund (LWCF) has provided funding to help protect some of Wyoming's most special places and ensure recreational access for hunting, fishing and other outdoor activities. Wyoming has received approximately $132 million over the past five decades, protecting places such as Grand Teton National Park, Bridger-Teton National Forest, National Elk Refuge, Bighorn Canyon National Recreation Area and Craig Thomas-Little Mountain Special Management Area.

Forest Legacy Program (FLP) grants are also funded under LWCF, to help protect working forests. The FLP cost-share funding supports timber sector jobs and sustainable forest operations while enhancing wildlife habitat, water quality and recreation. For example, the FLP contributed to places such as the Munger Mountain Corridor near Jackson Hole. The Forest Legacy Program assists states and private forest owners to maintain working forest lands through matching grants for permanent conservation easement and fee acquisitions, and has leveraged approximately $9 million in federal funds to invest in Wyoming's forests, while protecting air and water quality, wildlife habitat, access for recreation and other public benefits provided by forests.

LWCF state assistance grants have further supported hundreds of projects across Wyoming's state and local parks including Glendo State Park, Hot Springs State Park, Keyhole State Park and Guernsey State Park.

Economic Benefits

Active outdoor recreation is an important part of the Wyoming economy. The Outdoor Industry Association has found that active outdoor recreation generates $5.6 billion in consumer spending in Wyoming, and supports 50,000 jobs which generate $1.6 billion in wages and salaries, and produces $514 million annually in state and local tax revenue. Further, the U.S. Census reports that each year 762,000 people hunt, fish, or enjoy wildlife-watching in Wyoming, contributing $300 million in wildlife recreation spending.

LWCF is a simple idea: that a portion of offshore drilling fees should be used to protect important land and water for all Americans. These are not taxpayer dollars. Unfortunately, the promise of LWCF has been broken. The program is authorized to receive up to $900 million each year—but most of these funds have been diverted elsewhere. Now is the time to fix this and ensure that funds retained in the LWCF account are used for their intended conservation and recreation purposes.

LWCF supports the acquisition of land and conservation easements to protect our national parks, wildlife refuges, forests, trails, and BLM sites, grants funds to the states for local and state park needs, protects critical wildlife habitat, watersheds and recreational access, and conserves working farms, ranches and forestlands that enhance local economies.

LWCF in Wyoming

Craig Thomas Little Mountain Special Management Area

Located approximately 50 miles from the town of Cody, this remarkable concentration of natural and cultural features is managed by the Bureau of Land Management. Little Mountain's well-established populations of elk, black bear, deer, antelope, bighorn sheep, and mountain lion, as well as sage grouse and other small game, make it a destination for thousands of sportsmen each year. The Big Horn River and its tributaries are likewise a major draw for anglers. Because of its importance for outdoor recreation, the protection of this area has been a significant priority for sportsmen and many other Wyomingans. In 2010, $2 million of LWCF was used to protect Devil's Canyon Ranch, providing permanent recreation access, wildlife protection, and preservation of historic sites.

The Fiscal Year 2019 President's Budget:

The President's Fiscal Year 2019 Budget proposal would gut the Land and Water Conservation Fund, reducing the program's budget by over 100% from enacted levels. Under this proposal, no projects would be funded for federal land conservation at America's National Parks, National Forests, National Wildlife Refuges, and other public lands. State grant programs to support local recreation facilities, state parks, wildlife habitat, and other community conservation priorities would also be completely wiped out. Without robust LWCF funding in FY 2019, Wyoming's conservation and outdoor recreation needs could be put on hold or lost forever.
